RADICAL WORDS
OF THE
MOHAWK LANGUAGE,

WITH THEIR DERIVATIVES

BY REV. JAMES BRUYAS S. J.

RECTOR OF THE SEMINARY

NEW YORK :
GRANDISON PRESS.
1848

PREFACE.

Two volumes contain undoubtedly the oldest grammatical or lexicographical treatise on the language of the Mohawks, and although but few of that tribe now reside in the State, the Mohawks occupy a most important place in our early history, and undeniably decided the sovereignty of New-York, and with it of most of North America. The History of the Five Nations, Holowentson, as they called themselves, has been imperfectly written by Gouven, and will hereafter afford a subject for a useful work.

The Iroquois left no monuments on our soil : their language is their real monument. The French missionaries, who, from the days of the devoted Legues to the close of the seventeenth century, when the cruel act of Bellinmont prohibited any further attempts to christianize them, labored among the tribes, studied the various dialects with the care and ability of educated men. Chamoussin wrote a Huron grammar and works in Ojibwaga, Carheil in Cayuga, and Breyer in Mohawk.

The present volume is one of the works of the last named, and was written evidently in the latter part of the seventeenth century, and most probably on the banks of the Mohawk. It is a closely written manuscript of 145 pages, which has been long preserved in the Mission House at Goughswaga or Sault St Louis near Montreal, adding to the interest of the room where Charlevoix and Lafite wrote.

The grammatical sketch is rather a notice of notice. The next work, the Barrenes Americains, or Mohawk Radical Words, comprises the primitive words of the language, arranged in two columns, with derivatives from each word, and examples in many cases of great importance in explaining the manners, habits and ideas of the people. Except in strict alphabetical arrangement, it is a very full Mohawk Dictionary, written in Latin, but with the meaning of the words in French.

The word taken as a root is a supposed infinitive, and in subsequent editions of this work, the present infinitive was adopted, but the present is the book as prepared by its author.

This divergman, Father Jacques Barthe, of the Society of Jesus, a native of Lyons, came to Canada in 1666, arriving at Quebec on the third of August. From the fourteenth of July 1703, when he set out for the Mohawk, down to his death at the Mohawk mission of Saint St Louis, subsequent to 1703, he was constantly connected with the missions among the Five Nations, spoke the Mohawk as well as he did French, and was regarded as the Master of the language, in which he composed several works, besides the present and other treatises on it. His writings were admitted by all, not only the writers of his order, but by Hennepin (who seems to have possessed this very manuscript), Paul Infumant and Cotton Mather. His knowledge of the various dialects of the Iroquois must have been great indeed; for after a short stay among the Mohawks in 1671, he was at Onondaga from September 1687 to 1677; then among the Mohawks till 1679, except in 1673, when he was in the Seneca tribe. After that, he was chiefly at the Mission of Saint St Louis among the St Lawrence. He was Superior of the Iroquois missions for several years, and Superior of all the missions in Canada from 1693 to 1700. In the negotiations between the French and Iroquois from 1690 to 1711, he took an active part, and visited New York with a letter assuring the termination of hostilities. His last appearance in New York was in 1700 and 1701, at Onondaga.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, at a pace of 3.0 to 3.5 miles per hour. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks for physical and psychological health. The physical health assessment included measures of weight, body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, blood pressure, heart rate, and resting metabolic rate. The psychological health assessment included measures of self-esteem, anxiety, and depression. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program resulted in a significant decrease in weight, BMI, waist circumference, blood pressure, heart rate, and resting metabolic rate. The walking program also resulted in a significant increase in self-esteem, a significant decrease in anxiety, and a significant decrease in depression. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can have a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Bursa, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical activity program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks for physical and psychological health. The physical health assessment included measures of body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, and blood pressure. The psychological health assessment included measures of self-esteem, anxiety, and depression. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program resulted in a significant decrease in BMI, waist circumference, and blood pressure. It also resulted in a significant increase in self-esteem and a significant decrease in anxiety and depression. The control group showed no significant changes in any of the measures. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no known cardiovascular disease. They were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The training group participated in a 12-week program of aerobic exercise, three times per week, for 45 minutes per session. The control group did not participate in any exercise program. Physical fitness was measured at baseline and at 12 weeks using a variety of tests, including a maximal aerobic power test, a submaximal aerobic power test, and a resting heart rate test. Health was measured at baseline and at 12 weeks using a variety of tests, including a blood pressure test, a cholesterol test, and a glucose test. The results of the study showed that the training group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group at 12 weeks. The training program was effective in improving the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men.

Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of Salmonella spp. in the feces of dairy cattle in the state of São Paulo, Brazil. Methods: A total of 1,000 fecal samples were collected from dairy cattle in 10 different farms in the state of São Paulo, Brazil. The samples were analyzed by culture on Salmonella selective media, followed by serotyping and phage typing. Results: The overall prevalence of Salmonella spp. in the feces of dairy cattle was 12.5%. The most common serotypes were S. Typhimurium (4.5%) and S. Enteritidis (3.5%). Conclusion: The results of this study indicate that Salmonella spp. are present in the feces of dairy cattle in the state of São Paulo, Brazil. The findings suggest that dairy cattle may be a source of Salmonella infection for humans and other animals.

On average, women have a higher body mass index (BMI) than men, and this is associated with a higher risk of developing type 2 diabetes. However, the relationship between BMI and type 2 diabetes risk is not linear, and there is a threshold effect. For example, a BMI of 30 or higher is associated with a significantly higher risk of developing type 2 diabetes, while a BMI of 25 or higher is associated with a higher risk of developing type 2 diabetes compared to a BMI of 20 or higher.

Abstract. The authors present a new algorithm for the solution of the problem of the optimal control of the motion of a mechanical system with a variable structure. The algorithm is based on the method of the steepest descent of the functional of the optimal control. The algorithm is applied to the problem of the optimal control of the motion of a mechanical system with a variable structure. The results of the numerical solution of the problem are presented.

Introduction to the Special Issue

Author's note: The research, data collection, and data analysis were conducted by the author.

Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was significantly higher for the 10-trial condition than for the 5-trial condition. Error bars represent the standard error of the mean.

Montgomery, D. A., & Hunter, J. (1996).

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary, middle-aged men.

Dissemination: The Journal of Management

Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the body composition and muscle strength of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The men were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a resistance training group (RT). The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program, while the CON group remained sedentary. The RT group showed significant increases in muscle strength and body composition, while the CON group showed no significant changes. The results suggest that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program can improve muscle strength and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
